It's more than a desk job... If you are interested in a career that includes service to your country, science and adventure, you will find a unique opportunity in the NOAA Commissioned Officer Corps (NOAA Corps). The NOAA Corps is the uniformed service of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a bureau of the Department of Commerce.

NOAA Corps officers operate ships, fly aircraft, lead mobile field parties, conduct diving operations, manage research projects, and serve in staff positions throughout NOAA. Your career could include launching a weather balloon at the South Pole, conducting hydrographic or fishery surveys in Alaska, maintaining ocean prediction buoys in the tropical Pacific, or even flying into the eye of a hurricane.

The NOAA Corps is actively recruiting for the next Basic Officer Training Class. Contact us to learn more about a career that will open up your world.
